

RESISTANCE

Push for cultural and ethnic studies courses to be added to our schools.

Did you know the following courses are approved by Georgia Department of Education?

- Intro to African American/Black Studies
- Intro to U.S. Latinx Studies
- Intro to Asian American Studies
- Intro to American Indian Studies
- Intro to U.S. Women's Studies
- Civil Rights In the United States
- Holocaust and Genocide Studies

Classroom censorship bills have increased the legal power of parents' and students' voices.

Use this opportunity to push for progressive, inclusive curriculum!

what we can do

YOUNG PEOPLE:

1. Join Deep's Action Research Team (@deepcenter912)
2. Join/follow Georgia Youth Justice Coalition (@younggajustice)
3. Start a banned book reading group
4. Talk to your parents about who they'll vote for and how the candidates hold power over the decisions impacting your classrooms.

PARENTS:

1. Ask/demand your child's school to include the courses listed on the opposite page
2. Ask/demand the SCCPSS school board do this, too
3. Support our superintendent in respecting and preserving teachers' autonomy
4. Vote for candidates who support your student's interests

EDUCATORS:

1. Make your students your allies. Show them you're fighting for them (and they can fight for you, too.)
2. Join Deep Writing Project and connect to like-minded educators for solidarity and advocacy
3. Use Learning For Justice curriculum (learningforjustice.org)
4. Strategically partner with like-minded individuals to develop messaging and meeting Common Core standards
5. Talk with administrators to align messaging.
6. Partner with teachers who have a lot of credibility in the community, then get parents on board as credible messengers, too.
7. If you've been disciplined for teaching the truth, litigation and legal protection is available through Southern Poverty Law Center
